UNCLE SAM NOT SATISFIED

With the Acis of the Chilian Junta and Holds Two War-Ships Hard by.

NO APOLOGY FOR THE AFFRONTS AS YET.

The Government Officials Still Maintain Great Secrecy Regarding the Matter. Washington Notes.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 30 .- The Chilian situation is unchanged, and it continues to be a subject of solicitude in official circles. No new acts of discourtesy at the hands of the Chilian Junta are reported. At the same time it is not known that the Junta has amply apologized for former insults or given assurances that unfriendly demonstrations in the future will not be made to American citizens. The interest felt in the situation has not abated, and that the Government still feels the necessity of having United States men-of-war in Chilian waters within easy call, is attested by the fact that the San Francisco, which touched at Payta, Peru, on her way to San Francisco, has been ordered to remain at Payta and await developments.

The United States ship Yorktown, which some weeks ago was ordered to China, has been ordered to stop on her way thence at Valparaise for orders. She will on her way down the Atlantic coast stop at Montevideo. UNCLE SAM NOT SATISFIED.

In the event that the Chilian situation does not demand her presence at Valparaiso orders can then be sent her to proceed direct to China. The San Francisco will remain at Payta for the present and the Baltimore at Valparaiso. This disposition of the only available. United States men-of-war shows that the Government is not satisfied that all the trouble with Chili is past or that in the unstable condition of that country on the verge of a presidential of that country on the verge of a presidential election, new troubles may not arise, compelling the United States to the protection of her citizens and her dignity to be represented by a sufficient naval force in order, if necessity arises, that she may assert herself.

Government officials still maintain the greatest secrecy about the cable communications that are passing between Washington and Vaiparaiso, but they intimate that in a few days matters may so shape themselves that they can with safety make the exact nature of the trouble known to the public. PERIORITY OF OUR WEATHER SERVICE.

Professor Harrington, chief of the Weather Bureau, has just returned from Europe where he attended the Meteorological Congress at Munich. During his absence he saw much that was instructive and is well pleased with the results of the conference. "My ob-ject in going abroad." he said to-day, "was to attend a meeting of the representatives to attend a meeting of the representatives of the different countries in Munich to procure uniformity in meteorological work all over the world. This was in a large measure accomplished and all the governments were represented, even from Iceland and Brazil, so that you can see that the conference was tri-lingual and discussions were either in English German or French. The details of the tish, German or French. The details of the eting would be uninteresting to the general blie. We were treated with the greatest nsideration and cordiality wherever we out, and in many cases the National flag was n up when we visited the weather bureaus. he bureaus in Europe are not conducted on to scale that we have here. We have 150 employes under this one roof, and you will not find more than thirty or forty in any of the weather bureaus of the cities I visited; ther have they the magnificent service we office is more like the headquarters of one of our local forecasters.

NO COMPARISON. You can readily see how this is when you ompare one of these conotries to some of our single States. In Europe the collection of telegrams from all parts of the country, he accurate forecasting, and the painting of weather maps is crude compared only the perfect system that exists in United States. Of course we have a gra d sweep from ocean to ocean and the best opportunity in the world to study the weather. All of our observations are taken simultaneously all over the country at 8 o'clock A. M. and 8 o'clock P. M., Washington time, that of the 75th meridian, so that we have an accurate picture, so to speak, over the whole country at identically the same minute. These reports are made at 8 o'clock, tlashed clock the wires to this office, and at 10 clock the wester map is printed and my desk, Now see the way is done in Germany. The observations are sent to Hamburg and are taken along the coast with a variance of three bours cessarily such observations are not accurate, and nowhere do the weather reports and the fore asts approach the perfection that is

The Republican Convention.

The Republican Convention.

Reanorf, Va., Sept. 35.—The Republican State Convention will be held here to-morrow, and from present indications the number of delegates will be below the estimate of the leaders of the party. There are now about seventy-five delegates in the city, but it is expected that a large number will arrive to-morrow morning. Colonic Parsons, the leader of the anti-Mahone faction, is here, as well as a number of prominent Republicans from different parts of the State. The convention will be called to order at 1 o'clock to-morrow by Colonel Parsons. ### ADVISED HIS SON TO LEAVE. Young Wilkinson, Who Shot His Father, Leaves for Parts Unknown.

DANVILLE, VA., Sept. 30 .- [Special.]-Information from Laurel Grove is to the effect that Robert W. Wilkinson, who was so badly shot Saturday night by his son, Robert Wilkinson, Jr., and was supposed to be mortally wounded, a full account of which was wired Tax Times, is still alive, much improved and notwithstanding he received five wounds, hopes are now entertained of his recovery.

hopes are now entertained of his recovery.

Young Wilkinson has skipped. The father owed the son $300. After he was shot he called the boy to him and told him he did not blame him for what he had done, handed him the $300 he owed him and gave him $100 more and advised him to skip. The young man took the father's advice, went to Sutherlin station on the Fightmond and Pan-ville railway and left for parts unknown. There seems to have been no necessity for flight, as the young man (so it is alleged) did the shooting in self-detense and in defense of

BOSTON LEADS THE LEAGUE.

In a Victory and a Defeat Anson Sees His Fondest Hopes Decay.

THE CLEVELANDS CONQUER THE COLTS.

The Erstwhile Plucky Leaders of the League Probably Met Their Waterloo on Yesterday's Fateful Eye.

OSTON AGAIN won two games, making sixteen won games without a break, and to-night break, and to-might is hilarious with joy because they have a lead of eight points over Chicago. No matter how much crow Anson has be-crow Anson has before him, Boston is living on the fat of the land, and Boston is happy. Boston people take no stock in the stories emanating from Chicago that the New York Club has been deliberately "throwing games to Boston." New York has been putting up the best article they could under adverse circumstances.

The first game to-day was a walk-over. Coughlin was hit in the back by a thrown ball and had to retire, Welch taking his place. The second game was close and exciting.

Sullivan was again in the box for the Giants, and he pitched a great game, having plenty of speed and good control of the ball. Boston was very fortunate in placing hits, and it was due to this fact that they finally won the game. The visitors braced up wonderfully and played with much spirit, but it was of no use.

As the Cleveland-Chicago score was posted the crowd grew excited, and when they thought Cleveland had a sure lead cheer after cheer rent the air. Score:

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 30,—It was very evident that Anson and his team were nervous to-day. Nevertheless, they played desperately and determinedly throughout. Cleveland, however, outplayed Chicago at all points and earned a victory by pounding the ball. # BOULANGER ENDS HIS LIFE.

The Exile Frenchman Kills Himself Over the Grave of His Mistress.

ALL HIS HOPES FOR THE FUTURE GONE,

And From Morbid Infatuation for His Dead Paramour, He Became Weary of Lafe-Close of An Eventful Career.

(By Cable to The Times.)

BRUSSELS, Sept. 30.-General Boulanger committed suicide to-day on the tomb of Madame de Bonnemain, who died recently in this city. Madame de Bonnemain has been known as the mistress of the dead General. She accompanied him to England after his flight from France, and early in July last she was dangerously ill in Brussels, suffering from consumption. A Paris physician went on expressly in order to treat Madame de Bonnemain by a new system of treatment, consisting in innoculating the person affected with germs of phthisis with gayacoal, which is obtained from creosote. However, in spite of the efforts made to save her, Madame de Bonnemain died during the evening of July 13th.

Madame de Bonnemain, at the height of Madame de Bonnemain, at the height of General Boulanger's career two or three years ago, lived in Rue de Beeri, Paris, where she was continually visited by the General. Spies kept track of their movements and soon discovered that the two persons referred to were very intimate. Madame Boulanger was informed of these facts, but refused to apply for a divorce. It was greatly through Madame de Bonnemain's favor that General Boulanger was able to carry on his political intrigues, for the Madame had inherited a fortune of $1,500,000. all of which sum she devoted to the cause of the popular leader.

BOULANGER'S INFATUATION. To such an extent did General Boulanger carry his infatuation for Madame de Bonnemain that when the French Government determined to arrest him, he could not be persuaded to pose as a martyr before the French people by going to jail, preferring to fly with his mistress from France to England, and eventually to Brussels, where they have both met their death.

both met their death. General Houlanger committed suicide at about noon. He stood alone by the grave of his mistress for some time, appearing to be deeply affected by sorrowful recollections. The attendant of the General, who had respectfully remained at some distance from Madame de Bonnemain's tomb suddenly heard a sharp report in that direction. Running to the spot the attendant found General Boulanger lying dead upon the ground with a revolver clinched in his right hand. A hasty examination of the body showed that the dead man had placed the weapon to his right ear and fired the fatal shot.

The affair has caused great excitement in this city and some commotion among the General's followers in Paris. General Boulanger committed suicide at

NO ROPES FOR THE PUTURE

The police and the dead man's friends here have taken possession of his lodgings, and they have not yet announced if he left any statement. The General's position, financially and politically, has it is generally admitted, been getting blacker and blacker.

Of recent months he had no hopes for the future, and his remaining friends were few and becoming colder as the once famous General dropped out of public notice. There is no doubt that the General was conscious of these facts, and that they preved upon his of these facts, and that they preyed upon his mind. Coupled to this was the morbid love or infatuation which he had for his dead mistress.

George Ornest Marie Boulanger, French exminister of war; was born in Rennes in 1 His descent on the maternal side is Welsh, in 1855 Boulanger entered the military college of St. Cyr and was made sub-lieutenant in 1857. He served under Marshal Ranolon in the Kabyle campaign. He also took part in the Franco-Italian war and was wounded in the battle of Turbigo. In 1800 he obtained his full lieutenancy, and two years later was promoted to a captainey, having in the interim seen service in Cochin China. Just before the war of 1870 he became major. He was with Bazaine at Metz, but by some means escaped the fate of Bazaine's army, and made escaped the fate of Bazaine's army, and made his way back to Paris. He was then pro-moted to a lieutenant colonelcy by the gov-ernment of national defense and fought at Champigny (November 35th to December 2d). After the suppre-sion of the commune Boulanger's newly-attained promotion was quashed by the "grade revision committee," but was rest red to him in 1874. In 1880 he became brigadier-general.

After his recovery he appeared (1880) as a candidate at bye elections in Faris, at the Nord, the Sommo and Charent Inferieure, and was returned by large majorities. The atriotic league, of which he was the head, was subsequently suppressed, and the General was tried by the Senate on a charge of having, while war minister, appropriated $10,000 of public money for purposes of his own propaganda. He was found guilty. To avoid arrest he fled first to Belgium, then to London, where he arrived April 24th. The General was elected at the general election (September) for Montmartre by a small majority over M. Jofferin, but the election was annulled. # THE DEAD GENERAL'S WIFE.

Madame Boulanger, wife of the dead General, is described as being somewhat of a recluse and a woman of modest and domestic instincts. Reports as to her attitude toward General Boulanger since his becoming infatuated with Madame de Bonnemain differ. One story was to the effect that she entirely abnegated herself, and would be content to keep a home for her erring husband to which he might return when worn out with the pursuit of fame and thed of intrigues. In January last it was stated that Mme. Boulanger had applied to the French courts for a judicial separation from General Boulanger.

to be a lion in London society, yet his perronality was sufficiently familiar to Englishmen for them to feel more interest in the men than if he had been a stranger to their shores. It is said that only three weeks ago Boulanger made an appeal for funds to the Count of Paris and received no reply. The Count, it appears, was never able to forgive Boulanger for permitting his connection with the Boulanger conspiracy to be exposed to the world and for a long time past he has refused to have any connection with the exiled minister. But although General Boulanger was undoubtedly closer to poverty than he had been for many years, yet the evidence indicates that this was not one of his principal motives for suicide. Since the death of Madame de Bonnemain he has been deeply despondent. He seemed to have lost all his vigor and to be living in a desultory and aimless fashion. He would pass whole days in a morose silence from which his niece and other friends vainly sought to arouse him. He was even seen to shed tears, while he gazed continually at a photograph of his dead mistress. Instead of overcoming this feeling with the lapse of time he has yielded to it more and more. His ambition forsook him, and of late he has seemed to take no interest in French politics, about the smallest incident of which he seemed to show the most lively interest. His suicide, therefore, is not a surprise to his intimate about the smallest incident of which he seemed to show the most lively interest. His suicide, therefore, is not a surprise to his intimate triends, although sudden and sensational to the public. His desk is said to contain papers regarding his intention to commit suicide and it is stated also that important papers were found in his pocket. These are all in the hands of the police, but will probably be given for publication.

Obituaries in the newspapers do not reflect upon his political career except that in Le Journal des Debats, which says: "General Bou-langer knew the intexication of the wildest and noisiest popularity. It was Boulanger who said that the weakness of one too often in-fluenced the decision of another. His end fully justifies that dictum. He had no courage to survive her who sacrificed herself for General Boulanger left a will and a letter in his desk. It is stated in the latter he en-joins upon his friends to prosecute the great aims he had in view. He ascribes his death solely to grief for the death of Madame Bon-nemain. The funeral will probably be held on Sunday.

Members of the Patriotic League are already talking of demanding a public funeral in Paris for the late General. It is likely that they will try to make an issue with the Government on this point.

After the death of Madame de Bonne-main, Boulanger's wife wrote to him offer-ing to share his solitude. Her letter re-mained unanswered.

"BEFORE LONG, MARGURITE," Late in August after a violent paroxysm of grief, Boulanger laboriously carved on the tombstone of the Madame Bonnemain with a pen-knife these words in French: "Before long, Margurite." Thenceforth he was a changed man. He became emaciated and haggard almost beyond recognition. The authorities at Ixells had the path to the tomb macadamized at his request.

The news enewthe suicide was a bombshell in the Boulangist camp. The absentleaders were telegraphed for to return and hold a party meeting to decide upon the terms of a proper manifesto probably announcing the continuation of a revisionist policy.

When his body was examined after the suicide, a large photograph of Madame Bonnemain was found under his clothing, next to the heart stained with blood from the wound. No documents were on the body. The remains lie in a room sumptuously furnished draped with blue silk and adorwith a large portrait of himself, his daugues, and Madame Bennemain, Victor Benaparte called at the residence to-day and remained half an hour.
